ABSTRACT

Consumptive behavior is a purchase action based on desire, not need. Consumptive behavior is the act of spending money for pleasure. This study aims to describe the consumptive behavior of overseas students in Yogyakarta who use platinum shopee members. In this study, researchers used a qualitative method with a phenomenological design. Data collection used semi-structured interviews based on 3 aspects of Fromm's consumer behavior (1995), this study used non-participant observation. Participants totaled 4 people consisting of 2 men and 2 women 19-23 years. The results showed that all subjects had consumptive behavior like buying excessively, extravagant behavior, and buying just to seek pleasure which was influenced by social class factors, low self-esteem and self-confidence, excitement and stimulation, spontaneity, and indifference to the consequences.
